PRESIDENT

Tom Bradley is the President, broker and founding member of Energy Real Estate Solutions (ERES). He specializes in the energy industry with specific expertise in helping clients navigate the complexities of rural energy markets. His knowledge of key shale plays and client-oriented approach have enabled numerous energy companies, investors, and developers to establish, grow, and manage their real estate portfolios while allowing them to focus on other key operational concerns. Tom's experience with brokerage services, employee housing, and facilities management offers great depth to the ERES team.

Tom spent over ten years helping corporate real estate and finance executives transform their business functions by providing best practices research and benchmarking services. While at the Corporate Executive Board, a Washington, D.C.-based research and best practices firm, Tom focused on consulting, business development and account management, partnering with a wide variety of global and domestic energy companies. Tom also played an instrumental role in launching CBRE's Energy Facilities Group.

Tom plays a critical role in serving companies, investors and developers who seek to establish a more meaningful presence across active shale plays. Tom differentiates himself within the industry through his ability to bring critical industry information from across all geographies and stages of the shale play life cycle.

Tom is a licensed real estate broker in Colorado, Oklahoma and Wyoming. He is an avid writer and blogger regarding key energy industry issues impacting rural shale plays.
